Comments: I believe additional speed calming measures are warranted for this stretch, both between the existing speed hump and Providence, and probably a few on the East side of the existing hump. Possible removal of the median in favor of a more effective measure would be acceptable. I believe more is better, or at least a comprehensive look.

O – 25mph Kid Friendly sign needed

In 2009 the City Council reduced the speed limit to 25 mph on all residential streets in Columbia, with exceptions allowed for certain collector and arterial streets that are designed to handle higher speed limits.

At that time there was Council discussion as to whether we would immediately have to purchase and install these signs at each end of every residential block, the consensus being that we would do this gradually on an 'as needed' basis.

Since we moved to Iguana in 2003 we have seen persistent speeding on the blocks of Mamba, Iguana, and Jungle Tree that connect Jackal and Rain Forest Parkway. Because of the odd connectivity of this platt, these three blocks are used as connector streets between Jackal and Rain Forest Parkway even though they are fully residential blocks with lots of kids and pedestrian use.

These blocks need a 25mph Kid Friendly speed limit sign at each end as shown in the map above to provide the needed communication with drivers that they are driving on kid-friendly residential streets.

Comments:

My primary concern with traffic calming is that it pushes additional traffic to side roads. We already have a significant amount of cut-through on Armadillo Dr. I personally would love to see the problem on Armadillo examined sooner rather than later.

Check out Rollins between Stadium ^{E. Airview} & Scott,
Speed humps all the way down Rollins. Perfect

Comments:

Traffic calming is definately needed a long Rain Forest Parkway. It is also needed on Armadillo as this only residential street is often used as a shortcut for cars avoiding the four way stop at Providence and Rain Forest Parkway. A four way stop at Blue Ridge and snow Leopard is needed. It is hard to see traffic due to hill
