

1. Natural Tie-Dye -- could have some white sweat towels or bandanas available for patrons to tie-dye using natural dyes!

Instructions: <https://www.grove.co/blog/natural-tie-dye>

Ingredients (prices per Walmart): Avocado ($1 x 6), Beets ($2 x 4), Red Cabbage ($3 x 2), Turmeric Powder ($9.50 x 1) = $30

Material: 20-piece bandana set ($23 x 3) = $69

2. "Price is Right" game where patrons guess which product is cleaner and less toxic than another and then use the Yuka app to scan the products and see their chemical make-ups and browse alternatives. For each item pair that they guess correctly, they could be entered into a raffle to win the full collection of clean items.

Products:

- Bad Products (all are free -- I have bottles): Modern Expressions Pillow Spray, Jergens Lotion, Old Spice Deodorant, Harry's Men's Face Lotion, Generic Brand Face Wipes, Amazon Bubble Bath

- Good Products (prices per Amazon): Aura Cacia Pillow Spray ($10), Nubian Heritage Hand Cream ($10), Schmidt's Deodorant ($15), Toleraine Double Repair Face Moisturizer ($22), Simple Facewipes ($8), Honest Lavendar Bubble Bath ($10) = $75

3. I'd like to see a quiz board that has many behavior changes and people guess their impact on GHG reduction. It can be pretty eye-opening. The NY Times published one about a year ago I can probably retrieve.
