Executive Summary

The Hinkson Creek Collaborative Adaptive Management (CAM) Stakeholders Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System (MS4) permit holders (City of Columbia, County of Boone, and University of Missouri) have prepared the CAM Progress Report 2021 and CAM Progress Report 2022. The purpose of these reports are to present a summary of the activities of the Stakeholder group and the actions taken as part of the CAM process.

Discussion

In April 2012, the City agreed to the Collaborative Adaptive Management process (CAM) to address the Total Maximum Daily Load (TMDL) for Hinkson Creek. The CAM is a five-party agreement negotiated to settle the Hinkson Creek TMDL and includes the City, Boone County, the University of Missouri (MS4 – municipal separate storm sewer system – partners), the United States Environment Protection Agency (EPA), and the Missouri Department of Natural Resources (MDNR). The CAM agreement allows a wide range of activities to contribute to reaching water quality goals. The goal of the CAM agreement is to find the most effective approach or approaches for improving Hinkson Creek rather than committing to one predetermined approach, which may not be as effective.

The actions during the 2021 year include initial analysis of the LiDAR Project, approval of funding for USGS Comprehensive Sampling, beginning the University of Missouri Watershed Water Quality Assessment, and establishment of the Chloride Task Force.

The actions during the 2022 year include continuation of the University of Missouri Watershed Water Quality Assessment, USGS Comprehensive Sampling, and continuation of the Chloride Task Force and completion of the Hinkson Creek Stream Bank Stabilization project.

The CAM website, https://www.helpthehinkson.org/, is updated regularly to provide meeting minutes for each of the committees as well as more information regarding the CAM process.
